ARH 4/574 HISTORY OF INTERIOR ARCHITECTURE I
Interior Architecture Program/Department of Architecture
Erin Cunningham, Assistant Professor

MEETING TIME: M, W, F 11-11:50am, Fall 2010

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course traces the evolution of design history from Antiquity to the Renaissance. In this course, interior environments will be explored in relation to their social, political, cultural and architectural contexts. Special thematic lectures, interspersed throughout the term, will focus on world culture and the transmission of ideas between continents and cultures that shaped thinking about interior space. Importantly, this course intends to go beyond the traditional emphasis on pyramids, cathedrals and temples in order to provide students with a fuller sense of the genealogy of contemporary interior architectural space.

COURSE EXPECTATIONS: Assignments will involve a combination of short written assignments and class examinations.

TEXTBOOK REQUIRED: Readings will come from a variety of texts, journals and primary sources.

NOTE: This course is required for Interior Architecture majors and is the first in the 3-course sequence, though courses may be taken out of sequence. Any students in AAA and beyond are welcome.
