Live and Learn

Student Housing as Exemplars for Sustainable Living

The success or otherwise of the project that is sustainability will depend on the next generation. The Live and Learn studio will investigate the design of sustainable student housing environments that both exemplify and encourage earth-friendly living.

A site on a university campus in the Pacific Northwest will be offered, but members of the studio will be free to propose any college in the world as the location for their housing, provided they can gather sufficient contextual information, particularly about the site.
