This workshop will introduce students to the use of hand drawing techniques in architectural practice. Portland architects will provide students hands-on experience a variety of personal techniques. The first Saturday session will combine presentation and practice. In the morning, the architects will explain how they use drawing in architectural practice and describe the afternoon demonstration they will provide. In the afternoon, students will split into groups to work them, with results pinned up at the end of the day. Follow-up sessions will provide feedback on student development.
