New engineered wood products are making it possible to reduce the carbon footprint of tall buildings and their uses are being explored in many new applications. We will be working with the city of Springfield to design a mass timber parking garage for their new development along the Willamette River, as a demonstration of what engineered wood products manufactured in Oregon can do to both increase job growth and reduce the environmental impact of construction.